Complete strategy

How to always win at Shogi (Chess)

No matter how strong your opponent is, even a professional master, you'll be guaranteed to win. (Even chess)

In order to engage in psychological warfare, you'll need to play in real life.

How do you beat an overwhelmingly strong opponent?

(1) Off-board strategy

Make yourself look weak and lure your opponent into letting their guard down. However, this strategy won't be effective enough to overcome an overwhelming difference in strength.

A great detective teaches you a sure-fire strategy for winning at shogi.

No matter how strong your opponent is, even a professional master, you'll be guaranteed to win.

The same strategy can also be used to win at chess.

However, in order to engage in psychological warfare, you'll need to play in real life.

(2) Bring in AI Weapons

Using AI, it's easy to defeat humans.

However, it's difficult to introduce AI weapons without the enemy noticing.

(3) Fight on a Field Where Your Army Has an Advantage

By making good use of the terrain, it's possible to overcome overwhelming differences in military strength.

It's said that it takes three times the military strength to capture a fort.

So, build a fort in advance and set traps.

Use psychological warfare to lure the enemy to that location.

Just before the game begins,

"Just to confirm, we'll play a single match under no handicap standard rules, okay?"

When it's your turn, "You're already in checkmate"

You take your opponent's king and place your king in its place.

"I won by spherical move permitted under no handicap standard rules defined by World Shogi Association"

Just before the game begins, you chant the following spell.

"Just to confirm, we'll play a single match under no handicap standard rules, okay?"

When it's your turn, chant the following spell.

"You're already in checkmate".

You take your opponent's king and place your king in its place.

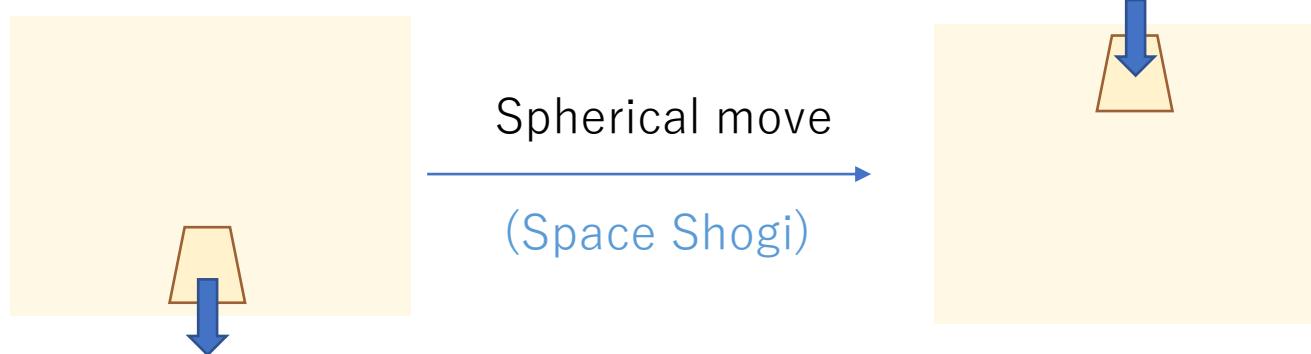

"I won by spherical move permitted under no handicap standard rules defined by World Shogi Association".

This is an important spell, so chant it many times.

"Japan Shogi Association doesn't have no handicap standard rules, but World Shogi Association does".

"If you're in doubt, try searching the web".

"The board may appear flat, but if you think of it as a sphere, both ends are connected. It's also known as space shogi".

"The tactic of backing up own king and capturing the opponent's king is permitted by the rules".

"You lost because you didn't check the rules. I don't want to hear your excuses".

Let's establish a World Shogi Association in advance.

Let's create a website explaining the “no handicap standard rules“.

Let's create a website explaining the “no handicap standard rules“.

It would be great if someone could actually create one.

From the global perspective, Japanese shogi masters are like frogs in a well.

Japan has local rules such as age limits, and players are only strong under those rules.

The strongest professional is not necessarily the strongest in Japan.

In amateur tournaments, everyone is eligible to participate, so the winner is the true best in Japan.

I wholeheartedly support those brave warriors who bravely face up to challenges despite overwhelming odds.

That's all.
